

FRANK LEWINBERG

Frank Lewinberg is a founding partner of Urban Strategies. His training in urban planning and architecture has led to the integration of regulation and design in his work. His public policy studies, including In Your Neighbourhood, Living Downtown in Toronto and Guidelines for the Reurbanisation of Metro Toronto, and his involvement in dozens of private developments, among them BCE Place in Toronto and Oak Park in Oakville, demonstrate the success of this approach.

One of Frank's specialities is managing proposal calls for public-sector clients seeking private development partners, his most recent projects being the development of North Toronto Collegiate Institute for the Toronto District School Board, the Children's Aid Society of Toronto's proposed head office and the redevelopment of Don Mount Court for the Toronto Community Housing Corporation.

Consensus building is a key part of the design process, and it forms an integral part of Frank's approach to master planning. Frank has guided a number of master planning initiatives, most recently for Bridgepoint Health, the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health and Toronto's Central Waterfront. He recently completed the Master Plan for Springfield University Hospital in London, UK. One of his early successes is the St. Lawrence Neighbourhood in downtown Toronto, now substantially complete.

Frank has a long history of successful appearances before the Ontario Municipal Board as an expert witness. He regularly lectures at universities and professional gatherings and has written numerous articles on city planning.
