

MARGARET SHIPLEY

With a background in Landscape Architecture and experience as an Urban Designer, Margaret combines artistic and scientific principles to her design of urban environments. She has been involved in the comprehensive design and visioning for transforming parks and open spaces throughout Canada, the U.S. and the U.K.

Margaret completed her studies in Landscape Architecture at the University of Guelph. It was there that she was inspired to integrate quality urban design and sustainability principles into her design palette. Consequently, Margaret is continually striving to compose landscapes that are both ecologically significant and maintain a strong sense of place. Her travel and work experiences throughout southeast Asia, Montreal, Calgary and Vancouver respectively have become integral to Margaret's design prerogative.

As an intern Landscape Architect in Calgary and intern Urban Designer in Toronto, Margaret has contributed to a wide range of urban-scale projects that vary in both scope and scale in Canada and abroad. Currently she is involved in the Springfield Garden Village Masterplan of the Springfield University Hospital in London and assisting in public facilitation in Calgary for transit oriented development station studies.
