Frank Lewinberg is a founding partner of Urban Strategies. His training in urban planning and architecture has led to an integration of regulation and design in his work. His public policy studies include Living Downtown in Toronto, Guidelines for the Reurbanization of Metro Toronto and the Tall Buildings Report: Initiating Change in Downtown Toronto. He has extensive experience working on dozens of private developments, among them Bay Park Centre. He was involved in the redevelopment of Brookfield Place in Toronto and Oak Park in Oakville. His work with Oxford Properties includes Yorkdale, Square One and Scarborough Town Centre shopping centres.

Consensus building is a key part of the design process, and it forms an integral part of Frank's approach to master planning. Frank has guided a number of master planning initiatives, most recently for Bridgepoint Health, the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health and Toronto's Central Waterfront. He recently completed the Master Plan the University of Toronto- Scarborough campus. One of his early successes is the St. Lawrence Neighbourhood in downtown Toronto, now substantially complete.

One of Frank's specialties is managing proposal calls for public-sector clients seeking private development partners, his most recent projects being Toronto Collegiate Institute for the Toronto District School Board, the Children's Aid Society of Toronto's proposed head office and the redevelopment of Don Mount Court for the Toronto Community Housing Corporation.

He undertook 2 missions to South Africa between 1990 and 1993 to provide assistance during the transition to majority rule, and once for the Brickfield's project in Johannesburg. He undertook a mission to Brazil to advise the municipality of Sao Paulo on public/private joint ventures.

Since 1981, he has represented clients in over twenty OMB cases, including some of Toronto's most complex and ambitious developments, all of which have been approved. He regularly lectures at universities and professional gatherings and has written numerous articles on city planning.
